

From allowing for earlier detection to helping to slow the spread of COVID-19 you can count on us in the workplace.

To decrease the possibility of spreading COVID-19 in the workplace, the CDC recommends that companies consider regular health checks of all staff entering their buildings. These measures can allow for earlier detection of the virus, as well as provide peace of mind to employees knowing that they are working in a safer environment.

FirstLight® Home Care has qualified Certified Nursing Assistants (CNAs), Home Health Aides (HHAs) and Nurses who are trained in conducting temperature screening checks on employees as they report to work, prior to them entering your building or facility.

- We can assist manufacturing plants, distribution centers, senior living communities and any other places of business that remain open with employees entering and leaving.
- Our team can manage various shift durations, from several hours a day up to 24 hours.
- We follow all infection control protocols and wear the necessary personal protective equipment (PPE).
- We will work with you on the use and supply of thermometers and necessary PPE.
- Our health professionals work directly with employers on specific guidelines and protocols for reporting and documenting all temperatures, as well as all employees who decline to have their temperatures taken.
- All FirstLight team members are fully insured.

Let our team of trained professionals provide regular temperature screening checks for your employees to help reduce the risk of spreading COVID-19 in the workplace.
