In an emergency, minutes matter. A crisis can happen anytime, anywhere, and even the most basic education can turn a bystander into a life-saving neighbor, friend, or family member. Minutes Matter, a new partnership launched this week between UPMC in Central Pa. and the City of Harrisburg, provides community members access to basic emergency information and education about life-saving interventions. "You don't have to be a trained medical professional to make a difference in someone's life," said Lou Bavero, president, UPMC in Central Pa. "Learning simple, easy-to-understand emergency skills empowers bystanders to provide critical help during these life-threatening and highly stressful situations." UPMC's Minutes Matter teaches community members how to respond to common, life-threatening emergencies related to opioid overdose, mental health crisis, cardiac arrest, and uncontrolled bleeding, through training in the use of an AED, Narcan and a tourniquet, as well as how to administer effective CPR. For more information on how you can get involved with UPMC's Minutes Matter, visit MinutesMatterUPMC.com.
